

NORTH EAST SCOTLAND COLLEGE OPENS ITS DOORS!

10 November 2017

North East Scotland College is set to host Open Days at its Aberdeen Campuses this Saturday (11th November). The College's Aberdeen City and Altens Campuses will open their doors to the public from 10am – 2pm and free transportation will run between the two for those who wish to visit both.

The day provides an excellent opportunity for those considering applying for a place on a course starting in 2018 to come along to see for themselves some of the excellent facilities on offer across the College including the new Student Advice Centre at the City Campus.

This latest facility, launched in August for the start of the new session is the go-to place for information and advice on money matters, learning support available and pre-entry guidance and is available for both new applicants and current students.

Visitors will also be able to see the fantastic new Library + Digital Skills Space featuring workspaces, dedicated PC work areas in addition to the traditional library facilities which include books, journals and multimedia resources.

Rhonda Fraser, Director of Marketing & Communications at North East Scotland College, said: "Choosing the right course is a big decision whether you are a school leaver, already working and looking to up-skill, a parent who has more time for themselves now the children have grown up, or someone looking to change career.

"We recently launched our new prospectus and applications opened on the 1st November, so now is a good time to come in and talk to lecturers - to not only make sure you are applying for the right course, but also at the right level.
