

Top construction craft apprentices honoured at NESCol

16 November 2017

At the North East Scotland College Construction Crafts and Plumbing Ceremony, held recently at the College's Altens Campus, twenty talented apprentices were presented with awards by Dave Torry, Senior Contracts Manager for Banchory-based R Davidson Painters and Decorators. The apprentices were supported at the event by their employers, families and friends.

Students were named as the top of their year in each of the three stages of training in bricklaying, painting and decorating, carpentry and joinery and plumbing. A number of special awards were also handed out including the David Murray (UCATT) Shield which is presented annually to the top student from the full-time Introduction to Construction Crafts course.

Pat Cromar, Faculty Manager at North East Scotland College welcomed the young professionals and said, "The annual Construction Crafts and Plumbing Awards provides an opportunity to offer formal recognition of the hard work and achievements of our students, who, in conjunction with the efforts and commitment of staff and the support of their employers, have been involved in the vital process of education and training related to the industry. We are hugely grateful to the local construction companies and organisations who support the ceremony in a number of ways."
